Dear Parents,

Happy New Year everyone! I hope everyone had a wonderful holiday and a refreshing break. When I think of January and what it brings, I always think of resolutions. Most of you have probably set your resolutions for this New Year, but consider one more. Our children are so important and sometimes as a parent, we find it easier to just do things for them, but by doing this we are not allowing them to grow. Empower your child by giving him/her a chance. Let them become more independent by having them do things on their own.

In the month of January, we will be talking about transportation. Children will read and discuss what modes of transportation they use, including motorized and non-motorized vehicles and other modes like walking by creating a chart titled "How did you get to school today?" They will also think about how different kinds of transportation are similar or different. This is an opportunity to compare and contrast the attributes of different modes of transportation; children can explore the science of how vehicles move according to their interest levels.
